Capturing the moments that last for a lifetime is why I love photography. Photographs can enhance your mood, alter your perspective, show you how things truly are or remind you what once was. Photography brings back memories of happiness, sadness, excitement and despair. That is what I try to capture.

ABOUT SHAUN

I was born in North Dakota and moved around quite a bit during my childhood before ending up in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. I was always surrounded by beautiful landscapes and wildlife. With that, and working on horse ranches in my teens, I'm a natural outdoorsman and it's shaped the type of photographer I am.

In the beginning I only took landscape and wildlife photography, but in the early 2000s, friends and family started asking me to take their portraits and family photographs as well. This is when I found a new passion. Fusing my love of photographing the outdoors with the people I love and care about. That's when I started portrait and family photography.

When my father passed away unexpectedly in 2006, I became lost and forgot about the goals I wanted to achieve in life. Over the next couple of years, family would ask for photographs of my father and I realized we didn't have very many of him. After a while, I couldn't remember what he looked like without looking at a photograph. This is when the realization of how important photographing memories truly is.

In 2010 I went back to school to earn my Associates degree in Photography. I wanted to make sure I was giving my best to my clients, many who have become like an extended family to me. Quality, professionalism and beautiful photographs are very important to me to present to my clients. I've also had the opportunity to study and work under some amazing photographers. They have helped me open my eyes to see the world differently and how to look at it through the eye of my lens.
